General Information

The following pages provide information concerning costs, freshman admissions requirements, Internet services, academic programs, and student financial aid for Kentucky postsecondary institutions. Estimated costs are based on each school's Title IV institutional budgets for participation in federal financial aid programs. The budgets show total cost of education for dependent and independent students who are enrolled full-time.

Information in this chapter is subject to change prior to the beginning of the 2003–2004 school year. For the most up-to-date information, students should contact the school which they plan to attend.

Included in this section of this chapter is information about Kentucky four-year and two-year degree-granting institutions of higher education. Four-year, degree-granting institutions offer bachelor's degrees, and many offer advanced degrees as well. Two-year, degree-granting schools offer associate degrees, and many also offer certificates and diplomas. The final section has information about trade schools whose programs do not lead to two-year or four-year degrees.

Trade Schools

What most people call trade schools are technically called proprietary schools. We've used the general term for the most part in Getting In, but you'll see "proprietary" occasionally in the following pages. The agencies below license proprietary schools in Kentucky and can be contacted for further information about the training programs listed in this section as well as those of other trade schools not included in Getting In.

All schools included in Getting In: Your Guide to Higher Education in Kentucky must be participating in a Title IV program and a KHEAA program or be a public institution. KHEAA has not independently verified information concerning the programs offered by institutions, accreditation and licensure, or eligibility of the institutions to participate in federal Title IV programs of student financial aid. KHEAA, therefore, makes no representation, express or implied, about the accuracy of that information but relies on information submitted by each institution. Some Kentucky schools that provide financial aid may not meet KHEAA's guidelines for inclusion in Getting In or may not have responded to KHEAA's request for information about their school. Students attending these institutions should check with the school's financial aid office for information about their financial aid programs.
